

Plastic Surgeons Will Meet Here Three Days This Week

The annual meeting of the Southeastern Society of Plastic

- Sheet Metal Work
- Built-Up Roofing

J. D. HARPER and SONS, Inc.

750 W. Short, Ph. 252-1515

and Reconstructive Surgeons will be held at the Imperial House Motel Thursday through Saturday of this week.

Surgeons from 11 states in the Southeast will report for three days of scientific sessions, business meetings and tours of points of interest in Lexington. Society president, Dr. Samuel Upchurch of Birmingham, Ala., will preside at the opening meeting at 8:45 a.m. Thursday, where Dr. Ben Eiseman, professor of surgery at the University of Kentucky, will give the welcome.

"All About Facial Wrinkles," a slide discussion, is one of the topics to be covered during the scientific sessions on Thursday.

The surgeons' wives are invited to the talk set for noon Thursday by William S. Evans, general manager of the Breeders Sales Company. Evans' topic is "From Rags to Riches—or How Poor Plastic Surgeons

Can Get Rich at Keeneland Race Track."

A trip to Keeneland is included in the afternoon's entertainment schedule.

After more scientific sessions on Friday morning, the surgeons will have the afternoon free for tours. The president's banquet and dancing will fill in the evening.

The meeting will be adjourned after a full morning of surgeon's presentations of scientific topics on Saturday.

Dr. Andrew M. Moore, 150 Mt. Tabor Road, is historian of the society.

PLASTIC SURGEONS BEGIN MEETING—The three-day annual meeting of the Southeastern Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons got under way today at the Imperial House with a welcome by Dr. Ben Eiseman of the Department of Surgery at the University of Kentucky. Speakers at the morning session and officers of the organization include (from left) Dr. Charles E. Horton, Norfolk, Va., vice president and program chairman; Dr. Thomas J. Baker Jr., Miami, Fla.; Dr. Sam Upchurch, Birmingham, Ala., president, and Dr. Bernard L. Morgan, Jacksonville, Fla., and Dr. John Hamilton, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who with Dr. Baker, took part in a discussion, "All About Facial Wrinkles." Other scientific papers were presented. The luncheon speaker was William S. Evans, general manager of the Breeders Sales Co. (Leader photo).